JACK CONWAY.

Tex Rickard will come to Boston next week to sign Jack Sharkey to battle Gene Tunney in a 15-round bout at the Yankee Stadium, New York, for the heavyweight championship of the world.

The latest Battle of the Century will be staged the latter part of August or early in September.

Word from New York is that Jack Dempsey will never fight again. It was Rickard's original plan to match Sharkey and Dempsey and have the survivor clash with Tunney for the title.

Dempsey has been doing light training in California, but it is said he is not satisfied with his own

PRISON GUARD'S WIFE HELD IN HUB SWINDLE

Mrs. Mary A. Callaghan of Allston, wife of a Charlestown State Prison guard, whose complicated domestic affairs were aired in the divorce courts, was arraigned today in Brighton Court, charged with concealing property bought on credit from Boston stores.

Mrs. Callaghan, who is alleged to have used three different names, and who was accused by her husband of being friendly with a one-legged convict whom the husband befriended, entered pleas of not guilty to three complaints today.

Two years ago the husband, Matthew Callaghan, was sued for divorce in Suffolk Probate Court. He filed a cross suit in which he alleged that Felix O'Brien, the convict with only one leg, had broken up his home.

QUEEN HOSTESS TO LINDY

H. R. H. Elizabeth, Queen of all the Belgians, is the first queen (by title right and birth, of course) to entertain Captain Charles A. Lindbergh. She is one of his notable hostesses during his stay in Brussels.

KING CONFERS HIGHEST BELGIAN HONORS UPON HERO OF ATLANTIC HOP

Coolidge Favors Cross

WASHINGTON, May 28 (I.N.S.).—President Coolidge has officially approved the award of a Distinguished Flying Cross to Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, it was announced at the White House today.

Brussels, May 28.—Belgium gave its highest honor to Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, "America's unofficial flying ambassador," today.

King Albert, receiving the young American ace at the royal palace, pinned the decoration of the Order of Leopold upon him and made him a chevalier.

Lindbergh received the high honor as he has received all of his honors, with some embarrassment and confusion and not as a personal tribute, but as an honor to his nation and his chosen profession—aviation.

Fifty thousand wildly cheering Belgians greeted Lindbergh as he swooped down at Evere Field after his triumphant flight from Paris.

Scenes verging on a riot occurred when the "viking of the air" was later being escorted to the King's palace for the royal honors awaiting him.

The gendarmes and police were overwhelmed by the crowd in the Place Du Congres when Lindbergh, escorted by the American charge d'affaires, stopped there to place a wreath on the tomb of the unknown soldier, at the foot of the gigantic war memorial column.

The patient watchers, who had stood by while the airman was being received at the airdrome and later at the American embassy, went wild when he appeared, and braved horses' hoofs, the carbine butts of the gendarmes, the batons of the police and the fists of the plainclothes men to get near his car.

Lindbergh was finally extricated and was able to lay a handsome wreath on the monument; but by the time he returned to his automobile the police had their work to do all over again.

CROWD IN STRUGGLE

There was a good 5-minute struggle with the seething crowd before he was able to proceed to the Palace.

The King received Captain Lindbergh two hours after he arrived in Brussels. At the palace Lindbergh was also introduced to Queen Elizabeth, the Duke and Duchess of Brabant (the latter formerly Princess Astrid of Sweden) and all the Washington, May 28 (I.N.S.).—Because of protests from all over the country the Federal Radio Commission today postponed from June 1 to June 15 the date on which the new national radio setup will become effective.

IN ADDITION to a very large sum, already given, to preserve the monuments of Versailles, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., now contributes 40,000,000 francs to complete work, immediately necessary, to preserve from destruction beautiful monuments in France that can never be duplicated.

Mr. Rockefeller calls his gift "a symbol of the deep and abiding friendship of my countrymen for yours," in a letter to Monsieur Jusserand.

THIS COUNTRY, more even than France, owes thanks to Mr. Rockefeller for that intelligent, useful and generous gift of money to be put to noble use.

The monuments and memories of France have educated thousands of young Americans, and will educate millions more. And Mr. Rockefeller's intelligence and wealth enable him to ex-other members of the royal household.

Lindbergh finished his flight here from Paris with a aerial flourish that thrilled the great throngs gathered to greet im.

He swept down out of the skies over Evere Field at 3.19 and a few seconds later made a pefrect landing.

The first sight of his plane in the clouded skies, assembled Americans rushed out of tents which had been erected to shelter them from rain an da cry of welcome went up.

Does Some Stunts

Above the field, Lindbergh performed a few acrobatics, as though signalling his joy at being in Brussels, and then slid down to earth.

The weather was variable with alternating sun and rain, but the crowds waited patiently until Lindenbergh appeared.

The clouds broke away and the sun streamed out as Lindbergh finally came to earth, the silver plane glittering in rays of sunshine.

He made his landing near the end of the field and then in military fashion taxied up before the official tribune where the crowds cheered, waved handkerchiefs and gave vent to their mighty exution.

Lindbergh's stunts before landing consisted of circling the field three times with sharply banked turns.

"I thought this would probably afford me the best chance I will have of seeing you all," he explained to American charge Dunn, who had raced across the field to greet him.

Dunn had used an automobile to run down the field to meet Lindbergh and asked him to taxi up to the Tribune.

"Well I found it without any trouble; am I on time," was the first remark Lindbergh made to Dunn.

When his machine had been brought to a standstill, bands began playing the national anthems of Belgium and America and Premier Jaspar quickly seized the young flier's hand and shook it. Then the 500 other persons on the tribunte sought to do the same.

Lindbergh was placed in an open car and paraded around the field, while the assembled thousands cheered him and gazed at him through the picket fence.

"The Spirit of St. Louis" was placed on an especially constructed platform and the crowds were permitted to view it from a distance.

"I am happy to be the first man to convey to you in the name of the Belgian nation the heartfelt felicitations of our people for your marvelous flight, which serves to unite our two countries and our hearts," said Premier Jaspar in the official wel-

The Italian flier said his plane had been saved and was in tow of the Supersa.

Previous reports indicated the Supersa was 90 miles from Horta, making slow progress because of rough weather and the desire to avoid further damage to the plane.

MAYOR BOOMS $5,000,000 HUB AUDITORIUM

A proposed $5,000,000 municipal auditorium for Boston will be the topic of discussion at a luncheon Thursday to which Mayor Nichols today invited members of the press.

In issuing his invitation the Mayor said he wished to get the opinion of the press in regard to the auditorium.

The luncheon is to be held at the Parker House. The Mayor will express his opinion on the auditorium and is inclined to favor it as a World War memorial. He pointed out today that an auditorium capable of holding 20,000 persons would be a real asset to Boston and that conventions which now have no place in this city could be held here.

The project is favored by the Chamber of Commerce and the hotel men of Boston. Mayor Nichols is interested in the proposition in connection with Boston's 200th anniversary, which is to be celebrated in 1930.

RECOVERS BODY OF SAILOR IN TENTACLES

Port Townsend, Wash., May 28 (A.P.)—A huge octopus, bearing in its tentacles the body of one of five men who went down on the tug Warren Tuesday, gave up its human prize after an hour's battle, fifty feet under water, with A. E. Hook, a diver.

Hook related his story upon arriving here with the body.

The diver was under water repairing a flatboat, he said, when he sighted the devilfish making its way along the bottom of the sound with the body in its tentacles.

Seizing a spike pole, Hook attacked the sea monster.

Minutes were on he, the diver thrust and lunged at the octopus, which gave cavorte battle, but grim ly held to the body.

Time after time the diverhad ward off the sweep with the power of its climbing arms.

The water was becoming cloudy. Centering his thrusts on the middle section of the underside demon Hook literally cut his tentacled adversary to ribbons before the death struggle was ended.

In Port Townsend the body was tentatively identified as that of H. Healey, cook on the sunken tug. Attempts were being made to get in communication with his relatives, who are known to live near Atlanta, Ga.

None of the bodies of the other four men aboard the tug has been recovered.

EX-PASTOR TO WAIT YEAR FOR RETRIAL

New Haven, Ct., May 28 (I.N.S.).—Guy Willis Holmes must wait nearly another year before he will learn whether he may be reinstated as a minister of the Methodist church. This was the decision reached by a council from conferences of New Hampshire, New England Southern and New York East.

Dr. Charles E. Spalding of New London, counsel for Mr. Holmes, announced the decision. Mr. Holmes' case was ordered remanded for retrial at the next annual meeting of the New England Southern Conference at New Bedford next April.

"Mr. Holmes is not a well man," said Dr. Spalding today. "He has a place in the country to which he will retire and endeavor to build his strength up."

Mr. Holmes was unfrocked at South Manchester, Ct., because of accusations made against him by a New England tearoom waitress. He was placed on trial in Boston and his jury disagreed. Then Mr. Holmes asked his church to restore him to the ministry.

SHAW FORTUNE OF $1,000,000 BUT A 'MYTH'

The story of the fortune supposed to have been left by Joseph Shaw, a fraud lampfighter of the South End, who is said to have died in 1827, turned out to be a myth.

Shaw and his wife were reported to have left an estate of $1,000,000 when they passed from this mundane sphere nearly three-quarters of a century ago, and this was believed to have multiplied during the passing years into the tidy sum of more than $1,000,000.

Since the story of the unclaimed fortune was first published more than a hundred members of the Shaw family from all parts of the United States have made claims for their share of the million.

Now, Miss Mary Smith, of the office force of Arthur W. Smith, a contractor of probate and equity in County, who was assigned to the task of searching for records of the Shaw fortune, reports there is no record of a Joseph Shaw having died in 1827, and the reported fortune, as per her investigation shows, is simply a myth.

BRUSSELS GIVES GLORIOUS WELCOME TO 'VIKING OF THE SKY'

'LINDY' IS GREETED BY KING

come, which was tendered Lindbergh in the officers' mess.

When Lindbergh left the officers' mess the crowds broke through a section of the fence in their anxiety to see the hero, but soldiers held them back with bayonets.

The flier then proceeded to the Embassy under a heavy escort, receiving loud plaudits as he proceeded.

While Lindbergh was changing into civilian clothes at the embassy, the great crowds demanded a sight of him, and Lindbergh made a brief appearance on the balcony and saluted the crowds.

Salutes the Crowds

In the embassy garden he talked with 100 Belgian, French and American correspondents.

"The weather wasn't too bad," said Lindbergh. "There was a little wind and I was delayed an hour by circling over Senlis where I dropped an American flag. That was thought to be a nice thing to do, so I did it."

Asked if he planned to go to Holland, Lindbergh said:

"I really don't know. After I fly to England I have no plans. I will have to await information from the United States."

"Do you mean the government or your backers?" he was asked.

"Both. I'm going to follow instructions that are going to be decided for me."

When he was nearing the field Lindbergh dived his plane and then quickly mounted and the crowds thought he was going to "loop the loop."

"That was supposed to be a stunt —not a loop the loop," he exclaimed. "It was what we call a climbing turn."

One of the first to greet the young flier was the middle-aged son of King Albert. Lindbergh then was presented to an array of Belgian military and naval leaders in full dress form. After this he passed on down the line of diplomats and political leaders, modestly accepting their welcome and praises with thanks.

The air hero was the center of attention throughout the Grand Louise hotel at the Aviation meeting where he was given a chance to change his flying clothes.

He was then scheduled to visit the tomb of the unknown soldier, where he will lay a wreath shortly after 4 o'clock he was to be received at the palace and decorated with the Order of Leopold, the highest honor which King Albert can bestow upon him.

The King loved to have Lindbergh with him for half an hour of personal conversation, for King Albert, who knows a great deal of the feelings of aviation himself, is anxious to know all of the details of Lindbergh's flight.

After leaving the palace, Lindbergh will proceed to the Royal Aero Club where he will be given a reception. Tonight he will be tendered a banquet by the American Club, with the Duke of Brabant, Premier Jaspar and other prominent Belgians present.

Tomorrow Lindbergh will be officially welcomed at the famous old Hotel de Ville, and then he will again resume his flight, heading for London.

HERO'S NEWEST AIR TRAIL

ANOTHER ROUTE HE MAKES FAMOUS

Map shows the route which Captain Lindbergh, the winged Missourian, took in his hop from Paris to Brussels today. This "air line" now will be famous as "the one over which Lindy flew."

Lindy Is Learning How to Kiss, But It Comes Hard

Paris, May 28 (A.P.).—Among his many new experiences, Aviator Lindbergh is learning much about the kiss. Often this week he was embraced by bearded gentlemen and kissed, on both cheeks, yesterday he got some training in what is expected of a public hero in this respect.

At the Citroen automobile factory one of a group of girls presented him with a bunch of red roses as a sign of affection. He took the flowers, smiled and expressed his thanks.

But the French maiden, versed in ceremonial tactics, waited for something else.

His face growing red, Lindbergh finally leaned down and barely brushed his lips on her cheek. He shook hands with the others to their visible disappointment.

'LINDY' PIERCES RAIN CLOUDS IN BELGIAN DASH

Evere Flying Field, Brussels, Belgium, May 28 (A.P.).—Captain Mathey, French journalist and aviator, who made the trip from Paris to Brussels in one of the planes escorting Captain Lindbergh, gave the Associated Press the following account.

"Lindbergh went out of the blue sky and silver clouds of Paris through a small head storm and another sudden squall into the rain and mist of Belgium. He traveled fast at times, but generally just well over 100 miles an hour.

"The accompanying airplanes, most of them unofficial and two filled with pursuing newspaper men, followed the trans-Atlantic hero a short distance south of Le Bourget flying field toward Paris, then wheeled to give him a chance to be seen alone by the people filling the streets and also to get a little start in case the ocean-hopper tried to show some speed.

FLIES FAR IN ADVANCE.

"Lindbergh did not tarry long. He headed north, and the heavier and slower planes at times were outdistanced, partly because they felt obliged to keep off to one side to avoid any possibility of accident.

"The light gray clouds of the capital soon merged into darker and more ominous ones. The 'Spirit of St. Louis,' sparkingly new to fresh paint and varnish, was a spot of silver against the sombre clouds.

"Lindbergh went swiftly and smoothly. The path of the trailing group came close to his just beyond Chantilly forest as he flew over Senlis, where in a gesture much appreciated by the French, he dropped a second American flag similar to that with which he said good-bye to Paris over the Place de la Concorde.

AU REVOIR TO SENLIS.

"This one also had a message attached: 'Au revoir, cher Senlis. Dix mille remerciements pour votre bonne gout mot. Lindbergh.' Translated this means: 'Until we meet again, dear Senlis. Ten thousand thanks for your kindness to me. Lindbergh.'

"Pinsard, one of the French aces forming the official escort, dipped his wings, followed and came toward the unofficial group as a sort of sentinel to prevent these heavier planes from crowding too close on Lindbergh's heels."

DASH THROUGH SQUALLS.

"From there on the weather got worse and worse. Lindbergh and Monti, the aerial procession ran into a storm.

"The escorting planes were all flying side by side, official and unofficial, but Lindbergh was ahead, lost to the group for a time.

"The Belgian escort had come and all went on together, but Lindbergh, the center spot, their guest, who seemed likely to run on ahead and leave them.

"The Belgian frontier was crossed in a squall while the planes were at about 2,800 feet up at a 115-mile gait.

FEW AT LANDING FIELD.

"Soon, however, the sun broke through, the clouds parted and the odd group of Belgian unofficial fleet under the rushing airmail.

"Lindbergh caught the flash of military trappings, the glint of arms and dark spots of horsy, many thousands, gathered throughout the city in the public places although there were few on the landing field, for Belgium's capital had invited most of the air pursuers, suddenly appeared from above and, as the Belgian squadron of fighting planes ring, the white bird came down, and Lindbergh was there."

"KING BEN" PLOT AGAINST DRAFT BOARD BARED

St. Joseph, Mich., May 28 (I.N.S.) —"King" Benjamin Purnell issued instructions to his followers to beat the draft, it was disclosed today in testimony introduced in a suit brought to defraud the government during the war, Mrs. Esther Johnson Hansell, Purnell's secretary, testified today at the State's direction.

Mrs. Hensel told how, armed with questionnaires and written articles written by Purnell, she went before the war boards and asked the military questions the prophet Burnell's whiskered cohorts at Camp Custer.

POPE GREETS DOUGHERTY; NEW CARDINALS NAMED

Rome, May 28 (A.P.).—Pope Pius has received in a special audience today on June 29, and a public consistory June 30, creating two new cardinals, Monsignore Van Roey, Archbishop of Malines, Belgium, and Sapieha, Archbishop of Posen, Poland.

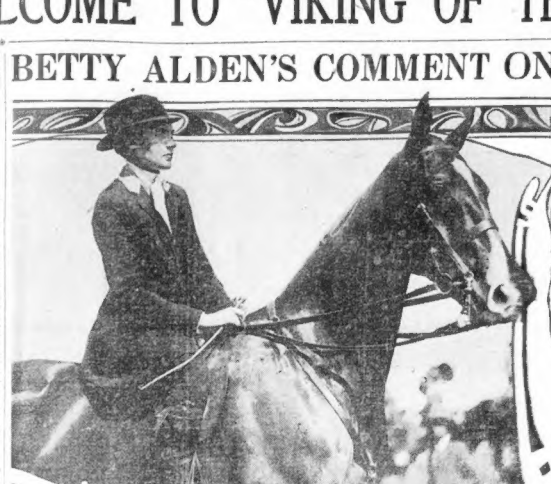
Next Tuesday being the Pope's 76th birthday anniversary, he decided to celebrate it by spending the day in spiritual retreat. The Pope today granted private audiences to Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia.

Herrick and Wife Fly in Plane as "Lindy" Escort

Paris, May 28 (I.N.S.).—One of the planes which followed Captain Lindbergh from Le Bourget today was piloted by M. Bierlot, the first man to fly across the English Channel.

Ambassador Herrick and Mr. and Mrs. Parmely Herrick were passengers in the plane.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY



MISS RUTH NEYHART RIDES IN TWO SHOWS

With her sister, Miss Dorothy, this accompli shed equestrienne is representing the Adnah Neyhart stables at both today's Metropolita n meeting and at the Chestnut Hill show Monday. Both girls, socially prominent, are widely known wherever King Horse reigns.

TURF LIKE GREEN VELVET AND A RING PICTURESQUELY enclosed in a brand new rustic fence await the timber toppers and their amateur riders at the Chestnut Hill Horse Show on May 30. An entry list of enormous proportions will keep the judges and the ring officials busy from the first bugle until the last lingering rays of the sun disappear in the west. The Chestnut Hill is a favorite show hereabouts, and practically every stable that boasts a high stepper will be out for the trophies.

MANY OF THE SAME SET OUT FOR THE MEMORIAL DAY Show are today on the Charles River Speedway, taking part in the Metropolitan. Mrs. William G. Gagnebin of Wilbraa Farm, Cohasset, is a Metropolitan contestant. Miss Elizabeth Sprague is entered. Also, some of the Hugh Bancroft horses and the Neyhart, Frost, West, Burr, Fiske, Thayer and Danforth mounts. Like the Chestnut Hill, the "Met" gets under way about nine in the morning, and the last class gets into the ring about sundown. So there's two full days of shows for the horsey sets.

FAIR MEMBERS OF THE SMART SET IN RIDING TOGS ON their favorite mounts are always pre-eminently of interest to the gallery at any horse show. The "Met" and the Chestnut Hill have many such. Miss Elizabeth Sprague has entered one of her handsome horses at the Metropolitan. Miss Adnah Neyhart will also be represented by Miss Ruth and Miss Dorothy Neyhart, will be represented at both today and Monday's shows. Likewise the Hugh Bancroft string, with Miss Jessie or Miss Jane Bancroft in the saddle.

TO MOVE ENRAPTURED THROUGH THE FLORAL DISPLAYS AT the Chestnut Hill Garden Club's exhibition is to progress from one marvelous and radiant showing to another until the eye is fairly overwhelmed with beauty. The gardens and so many superb displays, make the awards a thing of difficulty to the judges. The Edwin S. Websters, of course, are represented (the show is on the Websters' Chestnut Hill place), and Mrs. Clarence Dillon Wold has sent some of her garden's greatest beauties. In contrast to a riot of color there is the rock garden Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Dane have had set up, a lovely dell of softer greens, without the least touch of color in its whole composition.

ON JUNE 3 AND 4 COHASSET FOLLOWS SUIT WITH ITS Garden Club's sale in Unity Hall. All the flowers of the Springtime, the larkspur, the Canterbury bells, the foxgloves, and a charmingly blue and lacy flower named dibiscas, all the annuals and perennials will be on view. Mesdames T. Frederick Stoddard, Charles W. Gammons, Frank Pegram and Alanson Bigelow, Jr., are directing this blossom sale, and all the South Shore owners of rare and beautiful gardens will be on hand.

AFTER A SWING ABOUT THE SOCIAL CIRCLE OF NEW YORK, Philadelphia and Washington, the Robert Treat Paines are back again at "Stonehurst," on a lovely hilltop out in Waltham. They will be there for the entire Spring, without doubt, not making their Summer pilgrimage to St. Andrews until after the important wedding in the family, that of Miss Ethel Cummings and Mr. Malcolm Forbes, has been consummated late in June. The Paines, Treat Paine Storrow on the contrary, are sailing to Europe just before the marriage, in order to make the most of a Summertime of foreign travel. For shipmates they will have Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Hall, all sailing away on June 18.

THE B. H. BRISTOW DRAPER FAMILY, PERE ET MERE AND all the three sons, are all under the same roofiree once again. Mr. and Mrs. Draper only yesterday arrived from a month on a house boat in Florida, to be joined at the "Crossways" in Hopedale by the three sons, Masters Robert, Eben and Bristow, who left the town apartment immediately school closed. The Drapers practically always spend the Memorial holiday in the ancestral town that is so definitely associated with their name and history; in fact, they also put in a Spring and an Autumn season in that pleasant environment, completing the year with mid-Summer at some smart watering place, and Winter in town.

OF COURSE, MISS HONORA WINTHROP MASON IS ONE OF THE Spring's most picturesque brides. A girl of chic and distinction and of sapling slenderness, this sleek-haired Bostonian of the ultra circle is the one who says the fateful lines that transform her into Mrs. John Winston, wore a bridal gown of pictorial suggestion, a creation of creme satin, with cap and train of old lace belonging to Mrs. Owen Winston. Her matron of honor was her sister, Mrs. St. Bernard's Dwight, in Bernardsville, N. J., today was of utmost interest and importance to the Boston upper crust.

FROM BOSTON WENT SIX OF THE SEVEN BRIDE ATTENDANTS. And with them for the great occasion went exquisite frocks and hats and shoes. The hats were enormous affairs of horsehair, simply banded with velvet that flattened out into a star-shaped bow on the wide brim. Frocks of chiffon, exquisitely hand done, after a Paris model, by clever fingers in one of Boylston street's favorite shops, with shoes of satin and sheerest stockings, from another oldtime favorite on the famous thoroughfare, completed the ensemble. Miss Mary Holden, the honor maid, wore orchid, a lovely purplish-pink tint, and all the others, Miss Alice Sears, Miss Constance Percival, Miss Mabel Bayard Thayer, Miss Esther Underwood and Miss Susan Hammond, wore a larkspur blue.

THE BRIDE IS A NIECE OF MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH GRAFTON MINOT, of Boston and Santa Barbara, Cal., who presented her a year ago at a large and brilliant ball at the Hotel Somerset. This Boston debut was supplemented by a similar affair in New York, at which her cousin, Grafton Winthrop Minot, was host. Mr. Winston is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Winston, of New York and Gladstone, N. J. And with two such important young people as were principals, the wedding today was one of the supreme nuptial ceremonies of the year.

COOLIDGE PUTS O. K. ON CROSS FOR 'LINDY'

Washington, May 28 (A.P.).—Award of the Distinguished Flying Cross to Captain Charles A. Lindbergh was approved today by President Coolidge.

The Cross, which is awarded with certain reservations specified by Secretary Davis of the War Department, says:

"For extraordinary achievement while participating in an aerial flight and in recognition of his courage, his skill and his resourcefulness in making alone an airplane flight from New York city to the United States, across the Atlantic Ocean to Paris, France, a distance of 3,600 miles, the longest non-stop flight ever made by man, in the remarkable time of 33 hours 29 minutes 30 seconds."

Both the President and Secretary Davis looked liberally on the provisions of law which requires award of the cross only for official acts, in order that the government might officially recognize Lindbergh's achievement.

The Distinguished Flying Cross was created by the last Congress and only eight have been awarded heretofore, three going to the aviators who recently completed the round-the-world flight in the Pan-American Good Will Fliight.

It is the hope of Secretary Davis that President Coolidge will be able personally to present the cross to Lindbergh. In view of the Press dent's plan to leave Washington, June 13, it would be necessary for Lindbergh to fly or travel by other means to Rapid City, in the heart of South Dakota, where Mr. Coolidge will spend the Summer, in order to receive the cross from the President's hands.

'Diary' of the Prince of Air

PARIS, May 28 (I. N. S.)—The French Geographic Society today granted Captain Charles A. Lindbergh the society's gold medal for distinguished service. A similar medal has been given to only fifty persons since 1821.

PARIS (A.P.).—Charles Lindbergh has added to his hastily acquired wardrobe a gorgeous aviator's coat, which was presented to him at the Ministry of Commerce garden party by a delegation from the Association of Students of the Universis of Paris. It is made of black velvet with a gold band.

ROME (A.P.).—The Osservatore Romano, Vatican organ, which usually refers with restraint to news events and directly affecting religion, last night printed a column of unstinted praise of Lindbergh. The article dwelt on Lindbergh's simplicity and unaffectedness, referring to his touching meetings with Mme. Nungesser and representatives of the war blind and his affection for his mother.

BRADLEY BEACH, N. J. (I.N.S.). —Lindbergh and his plane will be modeled in the sand on the beach front at Bradley Beach in life size. The work was started today by L. M. Smith and J. K. Smith, sand artists. The models will remain throughout the Summer. The work of completing the models will take at least two weeks.

PARIS (A.P.).—The appellation "flying fool," to which Lindbergh objects, was given a little different interpretation at a reception at the International League of Aviators. Leon Bathiat, president of the "old-timers," said: "If all aviators had not been 'fools' aviation would not be where it is."

LONDON IN GRIP OF LINDBERGH 'FEVER' WAVE

By H. L. REYNOLDS, International News Service Correspondent.

London, May 28.—London is getting the "Lindbergh fever."

This staid old city, which is not given to enthusiasm, is rapidly working itself into a frenzy in anticipation of the visit of the American aviator-hero, Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, and it appears that he will receive a welcome such as London has rarely given a visiting fellow.

Newspapers are devoting columns to Lindbergh and scenes made in London, and the railroads and bus services are announcing extra facilities for transporting to and fro tomorrow to welcome the hero.

It is estimated that fully 1,000,000 will be out or near the route when Lindbergh touches his landing gear to Croydon soil.

Scotland Yard officials are having a difficult time in arranging Lindbergh's program, for there is little time for the many functions which have been proffered in his honor.

An effort is being made to have most of one day entirely free so Lindbergh may explore London privately.

Lindbergh has transformed Paris, according to the Evening News correspondent, who today sent a dispatch stating that "the old Paris atmosphere, heroic, unchanging and warm, which existed at the end of the war has returned."

"Americans go about with their heads in the air, whereas in recent years they have sobered all that. Americans about them in order not to attract attention to their nationality," said this correspondent. "Lindbergh has changed all that. Americans are as popular as when they came to the rescue during the war.

"Lindbergh will rest the same spell over London."

Lindy to Start Home June 16

Detroit, May 28 (A.P.).—Captain Charles Lindbergh will sail for home about June 16 on an American war vessel tendered by President Coolidge.

Such was the substance of a cablegram received here by Mrs. Evangeline Lodge Lindbergh, the flier's mother, she announced today.

The cablegram stated that Lindbergh would sail for home immediately after the tour of Europe.

Mrs. Lindbergh, who is anxiously awaiting his return, continues her duties as an instructor of chemistry at a local high school and is adhering rigidly to her policy of declining all proffers to commercialize her son's fame.

More than 1,000 gifts received from persons over the country during the past few days have been returned to the senders by the flier's mother.

Each day Mrs. Lindbergh receives a cablegram from her son telling her briefly of his plans, such as yesterday's, which said:

"I'll see King Albert tomorrow."

Paris Sobs and Cheers as 'Lindy' Hops for Belgium

Le Bourget, France, May 28 (A. P.).—Feted and honored by France, Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, lone flying hero, hopped off for Belgium this afternoon, where King Albert and his subjects waited to pay him tribute.

Flying the "Spirit of St. Louis," the plane in which he made his epochal nonstop journey from New York to Paris, the young American dare-devil left Le Bourget Field at 12:40 p. m. (6:40 a. m. E. S. T.) a great crowd of well-wishers.

He was escorted by two squadrilles of the Thirty-third French Air Regiment, which is quartered at Le Bourget. The French planes accompanied him as far as the frontier, where two Belgian squadrilles picked him up and accompanied him to Evere Field, outside Brussels.

Lindberg's takeoff was perfect. He ticked rapidly northward across the smooth field and then, after a run of 150 yards, turned sharply into the air, mounting at an angle of nearly 45 degree and heading south for Paris.

The escorting planes quickly followed, but remained circling over the field ready to fork him on his way, after a short flight over the city, he headed north.

Smiling and fresh as a daisy, the flier arrived from Paris at the air field at an early hour and left his machine with scrupulous care and personally assisted in filling the fuel tanks.

It was apparent that, with all his reliance in his plane, Lindbergh was leaving nothing to chance.

He took a kit of tools and tested every nut, bolt and wire, giving most careful attention to the motor itself. Meanwhile the crowd had begun gathering and by a little after 10 o'clock had reached large proportions.

The preliminary examination over, Lindbergh shut himself into the hangar with two chief mechanics and their main attention to the machine, this time with particular care as to the wings and body covering.

Ambassador Herrick, who has been Lindbergh's host during his stay in Paris, and Mr. and Mrs. Parmeley Herrick, the ambassador's son and daughter-in-law, and Captain Initial, aide to General Pershing, arrived at the field in an embassy car late in the morning.

They were closely followed by Sheldon Whitehouse, counselor of the embassy; Mrs. Whitehouse and other notables.

The whole party was immediately admitted to the hangar where it had its first really good look at the record-breaking monoplane.

While the mechanics worked smoothly and shortly after 11 o'clock Lindbergh stuck the tail of the monoplane through the hangar door, climbed into the cockpit and started the motor for its preliminary run. His quick smile of satisfators that everything was just as it should be.

With memories of the tumultuous scenes of last Saturday night still fresh in their minds, the authorities were taking no chances on anyone being hurt, and only those who had gotten permission were admitted to the field.

It was a big disappointment to many who had walked or cycled out to Le Bourget, and who found themselves jammed in the roadways or fields with little chance of seeing the plane until it was actually in the air.

A strong force of Republican guards, mounted and afoot, and scores of police were stationed everywhere to maintain order.

Wings His Way Along

At the last moment it was learned that the escort planes would have to trailers, as Lindbergh desired to travel alone, just as he did on his momentous transatlantic hop.

Lindbergh's course, after flying back over Le Bourget, he pointed to pass over Senlis and Beauvais, Amiens and Arras and Lille to the and then proceed over St. Quentin, Cambrai and Mons to the north.

The air was hazy and the sky filled with gray clouds, with a gentle breeze from the west.

It was the original plan for his plane to pass down the field through a line of French officers as a sort of formal ceremony, but this was abandoned for the simpler unveremonious run down the field.

A huge roar rose from the field as the birdman got into the air, and the crowd cheered, showing that the takeoff is one of the most dangerous parts of a trip, heading a load of fuel as the monoplane climbed skyward.

Despite his transatlantic flight, Lindbergh traveled light.

As Lindbergh zoomed away Paris bade the Yank a farewell that came from every heart.

Drops Farewell Note

Lindbergh had his own way of saying "au revoir." He circled over the Arc De Triomphe in homage to the unknown Poilu and then, flying at an altitude of only 200 yards or so, went twice around the Eiffel tower.

The Chamber of Deputies next drew him. Then he headed straight for the Place de la Concorde, and with an exultant throng that shouted, cheered and waved as he passed, Lindbergh dipped his plane and the huge needle in the centre of the big space quivered in response.

"Good-bye Paris," it said. "You have been good to me. Good-bye."

Then he was off, scorning the precious bit of paper, and the first to know that he was gone were the French aces who made a mad scramble to take it from him, and the gendarmes had to disperse them.

While they were straightening out the tangle somebody snatched the paper and disappeared in a taxicab, while the disappointed ones shouted insults at the author of the snatch.

Lindbergh, after dropping the paper, dipped once more, straightened out and headed on the rapidly lengthening north over Le Bourget toward Belgium.

Soars Away Into Sky

At Senlis, whose mayor has asked him to show himself to the people, he again flew close to the earth, dipped over the town and dropped a tiny American flag.

The weather for the flight could not have been much better. While the sky was partly overcast, there were great blue spaces through which the sun shone. A light breeze from the north offered little resistance to the passage of the plane.

In deference to Lindbergh's request, the military planes detailed by the French Government to go with him to the Belgian frontier followed the "Spirit of St. Louis" at a respectful distance.

Three other planes, headed by that of Commandant Weiss, a friend of the American flier, flanked the military planes as a personal tribute.

Lindbergh passed over Evere Field, got on his return from Paris at 1:05 p. m., and within a few moments was lost to view in the recesses of the northern sky.

Despite yesterday's arduous engagements, he had lasted late into the night. Lindbergh was up almost with the dawn, and after his usual breakfast of bacon and eggs, hurried out to Le Bourget. There, between Paris and Senlis, he soon had fitted with gray clouds, with a gentle breeze from the west.

When though, he found time to enjoy unofficial compliments. The French mechanicians who, working feverishly for the last two days, had brought the plane close to the point of perfection it was in when he started his long flight from Roosevelt Field for Paris.

Dare Death in Air

At lunch time, assured that the plans was in perfect shape, Lindbergh left the hangar for a farewell repast with his host, American Ambassador Herrick, and a few other friends.

They ate at Le Bourget while overhead the sky was swarming with aeroplanes, and from airfields all around the presence of the hero.

A squadron of five French combat planes went through aerial acrobatics in unison above the crowd on the field. They looped together, whirled through a full spins, Immelman flew high and low so closely hunched that it seemed every second there would be a collision.

Most of those admitted to the hangar where the "Spirit of St. Louis" was housed paid scant attention to its smallness. It stood by a great unwieldy looking one of which it could easily have passed.

Curious people peered into the cockpit and wondered that a man could have sat there, held close in the confining space for 33 hours with only the great black board containing thirteen different gauges and instruments to look at.

The baggage was sent ahead by the Lindbergh plane, so that his brand new dress suit would be ready for use at the reception for King Albert, and the dinner to be given in his honor tonight.

REPORTS SLAYING OF NICARAGUAN GENERAL

Washington, M.. 28 (A.P.).—Rear Admiral Latimer advised the State Department today that Captain William P. Richards, of the Marine Corps, shot in self defense when he killed General Cabulla, Nicaraguan bandit chief, at Chinandega yesterday. The admiral's dispatch made no mention of reports that Captain Richards also killed a woman who threatened him with a machete.

Mr. Damon in Lieu of Mr. Pythias

Weather, or no weather, Gene Rodemich wants a holiday. Conducting a jazz band at the "Met" is not as easy as it looks, so beginning next Saturday, Gene takes his week off. And Ted Lewis, no less, has handsomely agreed to hold down the old lob for these few days.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Clive Off on Annual Pilgrimage.

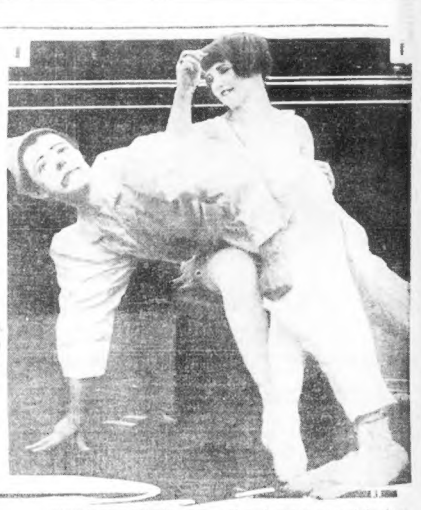
While denying that he is starting on another scouting expedition for more "Ghost Trains," E. E. Clive has gathered up his personal impediments for departure tomorrow on the high seas. The destination, of course, is that very merrie of Lunnon of repute.

DOWNTOWN DRAMA BEGINS TO GIVE IN--LAST MINUTE OFFERINGS HOLD TIGHT

REVEREND MOTHER hears the sweetest story. "The Cradle Song," at the Hollis, tells of the baby who grows to womanhood in a Dominican convent, who rounds with the gentle nuns until Love takes her away. Eva Le Gallienne, as Sister Joanna; Josephine Hutchinson as Teresa.

RUTH SHEPLEY, leading lady at the St. James, plays the hard-bedged character of Sadie Thompson in "Rain," gripping drama of the sultry South Seas in which Jeanne Eagles scored her greatest success.

LAURA LEE, one of the gay revellers in "Listen Dearie" at the Wilbur, the show that gives ample evidence that the water wagon can take you for a merry ride. This is the Canada Dry show, sparkling, but not pale.



REEF IN THE CANVAS. Sailing with the hazardous course of the circus brings its own difficulties. Here you have a domestic tragedy narrowly averted when Senor and Senora Tulano patch matters up between them. The performers are seen under the Sells Floto big top, due at Andrew Square Monday.

DRAMA NOW LOOKING FOR FRESH AIR

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

If you exclude a few fluttering convulsions by the hardier and more enduring of the theatre's children the drama of 1926-1927 may be said to have gone the ultimate way of all earthly things. Except for the forthcoming and highly artistic tremors by Eva Le Gallienne and her New York Repertory Theatre at the Hollis the late season, for all essential purposes, is nicely wrapped up in moth-proof containers and laid away for three months. Of course, Fred Stone and his companions in "Criss Cross" and the sprightly "Listen Dearie," of more recent arrival, are still coaxing the unwary dollar from sportive prisoners who prefer musical pleasantry during the weeks of rising temperatures.

MORE certain evidence that the theatrical season has reached the stage of locked doors and closed shutters is discovered on the dead walls of the city where, in multitudinous colors and extraordinary recklessness of type and picture, you are informed that the circus is coming. This, apparently, is not the year of the big Ringling Show in Metropolitan Boston, but the small boy is not to be denied his pleasure, nor is the anxious male parent to be left without excuse to wreck himself with synthetic lemonade and other delicious gastronomic vices of youth. For the Sells-Floto show, too big to be viewed in its completeness with one eye, moves upon the town Monday, at Andrew square.

AND if a first-class, sixty-car circus is not enough to convince the yawning public that indoor entertainment is passing from the theatre to the teat, or refreshment booth, word comes through that Revere Beach, in new garish and fresh paint, throws open its gates today. Shore resorts, naturally, run to fireworks on their openings, and between hot dogs and cold pop, and electric lights and our humanity brought in by countless motors, trains and the good old Narrow Gauge, the pyrotechnics of the season's salutary should not be entirely left to the men who shoot off the rockets and the bombs.

THE Publix Theatres, of which the Metropolitan is Boston's most important unit, have embarked upon something of communication spirit in their plan to make movie attendance easy. The prize package, as announced by John McGrail of the Met's ambitious press department, is a "Publix Chex Book." Commuters on the Boston & Maine will easily recognize the article, even before it is described. If you are a vigorous, or even passive, attendant at the films, the new Publix Chex is aimed to catch your attention. Briefly, it is a combination book good for attendance at any of the Publix theatres, not only in Boston, where there are many, but in other cities of the country where, by count, there are many more. To the really enthusiastic picture fan, with the price in his pocket, it is possible to buy a season's entertainment in a country-wide fashion by merely establishing relations with your own neighborhood playhouse.

TAKING THE AIR

PROCESS OF DEFLATION takes a bad turn when this pale underling has to tap the hero's tires in "The Understanding Heart" at the Orpheum. Jerry Miley and Carmel Myers are the deep-dyed villains.

Perfect Choice

MARY ASTOR, as the heroine of "Don Juan" at the Modern and Beacon, is the final choice of the World's greatest lover.

NEXT WEEK'S NEW BILLS

HOLLIS—The New York Repertory Theatre, presenting Eva Le Gallienne and her company in three plays, as follows: "Cradle Song," by Gierzorio and Marie Martinez Sierra, on Monday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings and Wednesday matinee; "The Master Builder," by Henrik Ibsen, on Tuesday evening and Saturday matinee; and "La Locandiera," by Goldoni, on Wednesday evening. In the cast besides Miss Le Gallienne, are Josephine Hutchinson, Egon Brecher, Alice Kruger, Sayre Crawley, Leona Roberts, Paul Leyssac and Beatrice de Neergaard. Produced and staged by Miss Le Gallienne.

ST. JAMES—Sadie "Rain," a play of the South Sea by John Colton and Clemence Randolph, founded on a magazine story by W. Somerset Maugham. In the cast are Ruth Shepley as Sadie Thompson, Frank Charlton as the Reverend Davidson and Walter Gilbert as the Marine lover. Louis Leon Hall, formerly of the Repertory Theatre and Emma Wilcox, who was with Jeanne Eagles in the original "Rain" company, are added to the cast.

Millers' Wild West Show Rides in June 13th

Champion cowboys and cowgirls, Cossack cavalrymen and hundreds of big Indians, caballeros of old Mexico and vaqueros of the South American pampas, exposition riders, camels, broncos and other trick-ing horses, buffalo and long-horn steers—these are some of the picturesque host of people and animals coming to Boston June 13 with Miller Brothers' 101 Ranch Wild West and Great Far East, ready for a week's engagement at Andrew square.

The coming of 1,000 performers and over 600 head of stock, together with the largest aggregation of arena ever attempted by a road show, will undoubtedly attract unusual attention for it is said to be the largest outdoor show of its kind in the world, and the only big show carrying a circus parade of magnitude in America.

He Might Like a Good, Long Ride On a Submarine

Like Alexander the Great, who sat down and sighed when there were no more worlds to conquer, Frank Conroy, second actor of stage and screen, now becomes the first man there is nothing more for in the line of thrills for him to experience. Mr. Conroy, who plays the role of the judge in "Rookies," the Fox film comedy coming Monday to the State, went up in the air under a motor-driven balloon to a big army station and accomplished his eight hours before the camera.

Frank Currier

POSITIVELY SOUNDPROOF

TOMMY ("BOZO") SNYDER, the speechless comic at the Gayety, cashes in on the golden value of silence as proved by the accruing rewards of His Own Show, the most heavily patronized in burlesque.

Wants to Stay

DOROTHY STONE and "Criss Cross" (Colonial) have nothing against the old town, but its nearby time for them to move on.

NEW POLICY AT ST. JAMES

The Keith-Albee stock company at the St. James will begin Monday to usher into a new summer policy. The style of the past will be retained, but as different productions are put on special players will be employed and the standard of attractions will be materially advanced.

This announcement was made today by Manuel Talbot, manager of the company, who has been in this town nineteen out many years.

"Planning this new production purpose, choosing the attractions," he said in explaining the new policy, "Straight stock is more than well done during the regular season and we want to succeed in it.

"The example in 'Rain,' which opens Monday, we have a number of people from the original cast of the Jeanne Eagles company. They will support Walter Gilbert, Ruth Shepley and the rest of our staff.

WHAT'S WHAT With Shows REMAINING

"Listen Dearie" at the Wilbur, (Second week.) Fluff and flurry set off with much drumming, sound and fun.

Fred Stone in "Criss Cross" at the Colonial. (Eighth week.) The stone family in its perennial frolic.

Tommy Snyder at the Gayety. (Fourth week.) Shortened that skirts will fall even in all the middleties of burlesque. The last week.

* * *

"The Ghost Train" at the Copley. (Twenty-third week.) We know it from the beginning—Mr. Clive simply cannot stop this play.

THE AUDIENCE DOES SOME ACTING

When Jane Willard sat down to make a final powered thrimmer out of "The Cat and the Canary" before coming to the Park beginning Monday, June 6, she was doing something more than just that. She was also preparing an audience.

"The audience as savvy to the play's purpose is quite necessary as the audience itself. For that they must consider this a comedy-thriller. Otherwise they will be disappointed."

Miss Willard, in this and previous remarks, may really allude to those audiences not in the know. Sometimes they really frighten us more than the frightful specimens that makes it impossible for us to feel comfortable at all.

"And as I don't know what goes on in the audience, out of the "Cat and the Canary" the actual reactions will be materially advanced."

This announcement was made today by Manuel Talbot, manager of the company, who has been in this town nineteen out many years.

"Planning this new production purpose, choosing the attractions," he said in explaining the new policy, "Straight stock is more than well done during the regular season and we want to succeed in it.

EATING PART NOT EASY IN FILMS

Lunch hour means only sixty life minutes in the working day for Harney Raskle, the over-stuffed boy who makes his screen debut as the stolled stenson of W. C. Fields in "Running Wild," the new film-comedy at the Metropolitan.

When the rest of the company left the dark, used set to still the pangs of hunger in the studio restaurant, Barney remained for his dessing proo separated by three floors from the food parlor.

Barney Raskle

And tried to forget about eating. For every minute of the time that he was before the camera, Barney's wife demands that he consume food.

The first day at the studio, Barney attacked the cookies provided by the property man with relish. But soon after his own heart. He absorbed the sweets as readily as a fifteen litre ice cream. At dinner he was somewhat surprised to find his usual appetite gone. After the third day of work in "Running Wild" Barney's palate was somewhat jaded.

Then, even so trying a role as an eating part in the film had its compensations Barney, aged Fields' screen family, consisting of Fields, Mary Brian and Marie Shotwell proved enough fun to satisfy any fifteen-year-old.

NEW COLONIAL SHOW

The Colonial will have as its Summer attraction the musical comedy, "Twinkle, Twinkle." The engagement will open on Monday, June 13, with Joe E. Brown as the star.

HE REALLY IS LEAVING

DEPARTURES should be sudden, a great man has said but they seldom are in the films. Richard Dix shows more than usual speed in leaving Mary Brian via the fire escape in "Knockout Reilly" (Scollay).

Kunnel Sam, Suh, Greeter on Duty

Not to be outdone by the more settled examples of "big business," the Sells-Floto Circus has installed a social welfare department for the uplift of its many employes. Col. Sam Dawson, Southern gentleman of the old school, is director of this humanitarian work.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Mack Sennett Started It All!

The picturesque and sportive Constance Talmadge seems forever going places and doing things. As "Venus of Venice" at the Olympia and Fenway she is an amphibious inhabitant of murky canal waters, "emoting," 'tis said, in smart one-piece swimming togs.

HARDY FILM TRADE ACKNOWLEDGES NO SEASONS--BUSINESS AS USUAL PREVAILS

BOUND TO SUCCEED with the army and the ladies, George K. Arthur goes to a training camp, smiles upon Marceline Day, incurs the wrath of his sergeant and stumbles upon various hilarious adventures in "Rookies" at Loew's State.

THIS BRAVE WARRIOR is W. C. Fields, the meek business man who suddenly asserts himself and goes "Running Wild" in the new Metropolitan film of that name. Marie Shotwell is a mildly incredulous observer to the phenomenon.

THE TOURIST TRADE to Europe this Summer will indulge in no little lip-smacking when visiting these places shown in "Venus of Venice," the new film at the Olympia and Fenway. Antonio Moreno and Arthur Thalasso just giving you an idea.

THERE GOES THE GROOM: When he wakes up he will be married. In "Wedding Bills" at the Boston Raytmond Griffith (in the middle), plays the role of the hapless man about town who had many times been best man, but who has ultimately been brought to book. Ann Sheridan and Tom Milbank evidently have something to do with it.

REVERE WILL START OFF

The official opening of Revere Beach, New England's playground, takes place tonight, and an extensive program will serve to usher in the occasion.

Revere Beach, with its glittering array of thousands of incandescents illuminated and arched along the boulevard, will be once again "all ablaze," and every amusement place along its area will be thrown open. Many new places will be inaugurated.

The major event tonight will be the display of fireworks, which takes place at 10:30, continuing until midnight. The display will be offered from the "heart of the beach," a spot that will serve as a vantage point for all to view the exhibition.

Revere Beach intends to offer for the coming season a larger list of attractions. There is, perhaps, no other resort in New England so popularly known and so easily accessible as is this "mecca of the millions."

RAY MARR AT BOWDOIN

Ray Marr and his musical comedy organization is the featured attraction at the Bowdoin Square next week. The two feature photoplays are "The Love of Sunya," with Gloria Swanson, and "The War Horse," with Buck Jones.

WOOD DOUBLE AT FENWAY

One of the interesting characters in "The Rough Riders," which opens at the Fenway, Saturday, June 4, is Col. Fred Lindsay, who portrays the part of Col. Leonard Wood. Colonel Lindsay was with the Australian rough riders all through the South African war and now climaxes this experience by commanding the American Rough Riders in the picture. At the beginning of the producing of "The Rough Riders," Col. Leonard Wood wrote to Col. Fred Lindsay from the Philippines, "I am fortunate in having no good looking and so soldierly a type to represent me. I am very much interested in the picture and hope it will prove a big success. I am only sorry I am not in the States, as I could have given a thousand and one details which would have helped in completing the picture but I am confident that those who were there have done their best to give a true representation of the old regiment."

Col. Fred Lindsay

Col. Fred Lindsay has consented to appear in person at both opening performances Saturday, June 4th.

Tall Trees From Little Acorns

The second generation of film children has now arrived. In "The Understanding Heart" at Loew's Orpheum, Francis X. Bushman, Jr., a burly six-footer, is to be found as the leading man, rescuing the heroine and doing all the other handy chores of the trade.

Squantum Mayor Resumes Duties

For twenty-five years George Schiller ruled grandly as Summer mayor of Squantum. Then he acquired a new wife and moved to Philadelphia. Mr. Schiller, whose main job is acting naughty old men in musical comedy, is still at it in "Listen Dearie" at the Wilbur.

NOT SO EASY, THIS LIFE!

Joan Crawford returned from her first "location trip," a disillusioned and wiser girl.

In her other pictures, and they have been few, the actress never had the opportunity to go any further than the "back lot" of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios for a "location," so when she was told that she was going to Yosemite to make scenes for "The Understanding Heart," the new film at the Orpheum, she was very happy.

Joan Crawford

However, disillusionment soon set in. The first morning Joan was rudely awakened at five o'clock to get her breakfast, and make-up, to catch the rays of the early morning sun. She began work at seven a. m., and declares she spent the entire morning jumping from crag to crag on Inspiration Point, two thousand feet above the valley.

In Barrie Play

MARION DAVIES dons the frills and ruffles of a generation gone by in "Quality Street," now being filmed in California.

CHANGES IN VAUDEVILLE

LOEW'S ORPHEUM—Walter, Clinton and Julia Rooney, all of the noted Pat Rooneys, will entertain with their own orchestra in the traditional family style of song and dance; Wilkens and Wilkens, eccentric comedy dancers; Victor Burns and Adelaide Wilson in the skit, "The Untrained Nurse"; Russell and Armstrong in "Squirrel Food Personified"; Helen Eley will sing the newest song hits, and there are other acts and the feature picture, "The Understanding Heart," to round out the bill.

B. F. KEITH'S—Jeannette Hackett and Harry Delmar, dancers and producers, in their annual revue, called, this year, "Luxuries"; Willie Solar, eccentric comedian; Ray and Dot Dean in the skit, "Alpheus Pure and Simple"; Julia Nash and C. H. O'Donnell in the comedy playlet, "Almost Single"; Peter Higgins, tenor; Moran and Wiser, comedy jugglers, and others.

MARY BRIAN IN TRAINING

For three weeks prior to the start of "Knockout Reilly," the film at the Scollay, in which Miss Brian has the leading feminine role, she underwent strenuous training for her part as a cabaret dancer.

After three days of practice on the crouch-and-kick steps, under the tutelage of Paul Oscard, dance director of the Public Theatres stage presentations, Miss Brian's muscles protested against walking up stairs. But now she can do those intricate revolutions and arm-flinging movements without a flicker of pain.

Mary Brian's present success on the screen is due to her dancing in a prologue at a Hollywood motion picture theatre. An official of the Lasky studio saw her there and arranged for the screen test that led to her being assigned the role of "Wendy" in Herbert Brenon's picturization of Sir James M. Barrie's "Peter Pan."

"THE UNDERSTANDING HEART"

BEGINS NEXT MONDAY!

The greatest story of the California forests ever written.

The powerful and poignant drama of Monica Dale, the girl lookout who thought she was "man-proof," until she was plunged deep into the most intensely gripping events that ever befell a woman.

A story of primitive passions and loyal hearts that will hold you breathless as it moves to its thrilling climax.

HAS OUTPUT OF OIL TURNED CORNER?

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, May 28.—Is the end of vast overproduction of oil within sight?

Herbert Fleischhacker, Pacific Coast financier interested in oil and a wide variety of other properties, who is visiting New York says:

"The oil situation has already turned the corner. Stupid competitive conditions are being righted.

B. C. Forbes

Out with us the chief bugbear was the gigantic Bench development. It was expected by some to become another Mexican Tampico Hill. But these expectations have not materialized. Oil consumption is increasing enormously. Not only is the number of motor vehicles multiplying rapidly, but tremendous quantities of oil are now being used to replace coal.

"The improved sentiment and conditions in California will soon, in my opinion, extend to the Mid-continent and Texas fields. There has been undue alarm. Remember that in the old days a big crop was a feast or a famine. The famine stage is bound to come before very long."

Mr. Fleischhacker also said:

"In California labor is well employed. Business is very good in most directions. Shipping on the Pacific is now a little ahead of normal, notwithstanding the situation in China."

THE STOCK market continues troubled. Money rates admittedly are the governing factor at present. The spectacular advances have been confined to relatively few issues. Most stocks are really moving forward very little. Beware of buying overbought stocks on margin.

WELL, THE LONG awaited official Ford announcement of a new car has at last come. The information is rather disappointing. The new product is merely described as "superior in design and performance to any car in its class." It is a low-priced light car field," and as having "style, size, flexibility and control in traffic."

Rumor has it that Ford's new model will not be sensationally low-priced, and that the main emphasis will be placed on the extra quality and performance rather than on its cheapness.

ONE BANK'S extraordinary record of having one of every three people in its city as a depositor, was mentioned in this column.

The Canal Bank and Trust Company of New Orleans makes even a more noteworthy showing. It has deposits credited to 40% of the entire population of about 400,000, giving a ratio of one customer for every 2.7 of the population. This bank started the year with resources in excess of $100,000,000, a figure not equaled by any other bank in the South.

Advertising was mentioned as being largely responsible for its growth, and now Vice-President Sydney W. Soniers of the Canal Bank tells me:

"We attribute the success of this institution very largely to the results from advertising in newspapers and magazines."

RICKARD TO SIGN UP SHARKEY

Promoter Is to Confer With Buckley for Bout With Gene Tunney

physical condition and does not care to enter the ring against such a hard-hitting opponent as Sharkey.

Rickard told this writer in New York recently that in the event of Dempsey failing to come back that he would immediately sign Sharkey to battle Tunney.

$50 FOR RINGSIDE SEATS.

Sharkey's five-round knockout caused Rickard to declare that the Boston heavyweight is ten times a better card right now than Tunney was at the time he was signed to battle Dempsey for the title.

Rickard wants to stage the Tunney-Sharkey bout at the Yankee Stadium. He will ask permission to charge a $50 top for this contest. This is the only way by which the bout will go to New York. With a $25 top, the championship bout would play to only $1,200,000 on account of the fact the Temple of Ruth can only accommodate a crowd of 75,000 fans.

If New York should crown upon a $50 top, Rickard will take the championship quarrel to Philadelphia where the Sesqui-Centennial Stadium has a seating capacity of 130,000. Even with only a $25 top, it is possible to play to $1,500,000 in Philadelphia.

TUNNEY SECURES CAMP.

Tunney has already made arrangements to start training at Specialist Lake, N. Y.

Sharkey will do his preliminary training near Boston, but will shift his camp to New York a month before the bout.

British Golfers Think They'll Win

New York, May 28 (I.N.S.).—The eight golf professionals composing the British Ryder cup team, which will participate in the International matches at Worcester on June 10 and 11, and later in the national open championship at Oakmont, Pa., declined Bobby Jones' offers of words of victory in both events. The team arrived here from England last night.

Prince of Wales to See Mickey Fight

London, May 28 (A.P.).—The Prince of Wales has promised Mickey Walker that he will attend Walker's fight with Tommy Milligan for the middleweight championship of the world, to be held in the Olympic on June 30.

The promise was made on the Coombe Hill Golf Course yesterday. The Earl of Westmorland introduced the American fighter to the Prince, who asked him a number of questions about his boxing career and displayed great interest in his record.

Afterward they talked golf. Mickey asked: "How's your game today, sire?"

"Terrible," replied the Prince, "but I have enjoyed it all the same. How do you get on?"

"If I get around in a hundred, I guess I will have had a good day," answered the boxer. "But Kearns is fussy—he often goes around in eighty."

Inside Golf

By CHESTER HORTON

One way to test for the right position of the feet is this: Stand with them right together and mark a swing. Then put them a few inches apart and swing some more. (Fig. 1). Then, testing with more swings, spread the feet an inch or two farther apart until, when they are 12 inches or so apart—(Fig. 2) maybe less than 12 inches—the position that lets you swing with freedom, ease and power. Then to further test the position, make a few swings with the feet too far apart and see the awkwardness that results. You wouldn't walk with your feet spread far apart, so avoid a golf swing that puts you similarly to a disadvantage. The feet too far apart upset all sense of balance and produce a jerkiness about the middle body that is fatal to smooth, rhythmic swings with the golf club.

By BILL GRIMES.

Now that Mrs. Edward H. Baker, Jr., of Oakley has regained her W. G. A. title, the golfing spotlight will be turned on the men players this coming week. The members of the W. G. A. will divide honors with the Boston Four Ball League on Wednesday when the play-off between the Southern and Central Second Teams will take place at Brae Burn, in conjunction with the handicap medal play tournament for the association players and the play-off for individual honors for the team match series between Mrs. Baker and Mrs. W. J. Haines.

One of the greatest attractions ever offered to the golfing public of the country will be the Ryder Cup matches at the Worcester Country Club on Friday and Saturday. The cream of the professional ranks of the United States and the British Isles will stage battle for the Ryder Cup, which is emblematic of professional team championship, on Friday and fight it out through Saturday.

B. C.-H. C. NINES CLASH MONDAY

Boston College and Holy Cross will open baseball hostilities on Fitton Field, Worcester, on Monday. More than 25,000 fans are expected to witness the clash of the Blattery and Barry clans.

Some think that Boston College is due for a rest win on the Purple's home diamond. The Eagles have been playing good ball of late, winning their last seven starts.

But Holy Cross pinned a 9-8 defeat on Georgetown in its last game. They seem to have come out of the slump that caused them four defeats. Whichever way you look at it Monday's battle is as even money bet.

Boston College and Holy Cross have met twenty-four times to date. And Boston College has been able to win but three of these two dozen contests.

Jimmy Fitzpatrick, "Chess" McCrehan and Ed Mullowney have wins to their credit over the Purple. They are the only twirlers in the history of B. C. who have had enough stuff to down the Crusaders.

Holy Cross opened the recent win was in 1926 at Fenway Park, when Mullowney bested Al Fons.

Boston College will take the combat in a slightly annihilated condition. Three B. C. ball players were banged up in the Providence game last Thursday.

B. C. YEARLING RUNNERS VISIT EXETER TODAY

Boston College's freshman track team closes its season with a dual meet with Exeter Academy at New Hampshire this afternoon. The Eaglets met the Exeterians during the Winter games and carried off the laurels with a total of 45 points to the academy's 22. They are expected to repeat today.

Delaney and Paolino Hear Crack of Whip

By Tad

MR. JACK DELANEY and Mr. Bologne Uzcudun had the Oregon boot put on them by the New York boxing commission the other day. The Oregon boot, if you don't happen to know, is a great big chunk of iron that locks over your ankle and is put on criminals up in Oregon. The boys wearing the well-known cast iron spats can't run away very well. Both Delaney and Uzcudun were getting too frisky.

Delaney, a light heavy, wanted to skip his class and flirt with the heavies. Uzcudun, on the other hand, wanted to duck all the tough try-out guys and pick on a bigtimer.

Delaney isn't himself with the big boys and has made only fair showings against them. The Spanish bologne, on the other hand, is much of a mystery. No one knows whether he can fight or not. He has a concrete kisser and has shown it, but aside from that has nothing a champ should have.

The boxing commission asks that the Bologne show us whether he can fight or not, and suggests to Delaney to stay in his own class awhile.

Quite proper, the boys say, quite proper.

John L. Was Real World's Champion

ARTHUR LUMLEY, in a recent issue of the Police Gazette, says:

"There was really no authentic heavyweight champion of America or the world in 1890. Joe Goss claimed the title on account of winning over Tom Allen on a foul in 1876.

"Jem Mace, the recognized champion of England, had retired; so had Johnny Dwyer, who defeated Jimmy Elliott for the title in 1879.

"Mr. Fox, realizing that both the English and American titles had lapsed, was anxious to have some worthy contender win the big fistic crown.

"So by his energetic efforts and financial help a match was arranged between Paddy Ryan and Joe Goss for the world's championship, and not the American title alone, as has been so often erroneously stated by many supposed expert pugilistic scribes.

"When any ring title lapses and there is no legitimate claimant who stands ready to defend the crown, then any two men can fight for the honor and the winner is entitled to the championship provided he defends it in the orthodox manner according to all rules and traditions of the ring.

"The battle was fought and fought on the battle-ground was the toughest experiences I ever endured in my fifty-seven years of pugilistic adventures, attending all sorts of combats all over the country.

"After being hounded and chased from State to State a ring was finally erected in a beautiful valley at Collyer's Station, W. Va., a famous duelling-ground where James Gordon Bennett fought his sensational duel with Fred May and where many other duels took place.

"It was a long, hard, fought battle of eighty-seven bare-knuckle rounds much too long and spectacular to describe here.

"Ryan, however, had much the advantage over his veteran opponent in many ways. He was in splendid form and a powerful young man of some twenty-four years, while Goss was an old stager of forty-nine years—much out of condition.

"It was chiefly a battle of endurance with splendid youth against dissipated old age. So it's no wonder that Lee Fairchild, the referee, declared Ryan the winner after the old game warrior's bellows busted and his wind gave out at the end of the eighty-seventh round."

Now Jim L. Sullivan later on knocked Paddy Ryan out in nine rounds for the heavyweight championship.

South is the dealer. What is the proper bidding and play?

In the next issue Mr. Whitehead will explain the reasons for each of the bidding and play of the above hand. Fill out your own chart and compare it with his method.

These hands must not be bid or played by double Dummy." I. e., as though all four hands were exposed.

Yesterday's Hand as Played by Mr. Whitehead

Salient Points of the Bidding

West, although holding distributed values in three suits, does not hold a good informatory double because of his shortness in Hearts and particularly in Diamonds. His best procedure with this type of hand is to show his partner bidding values by naming his suit. His partner will then be in position to make a free bid of either Hearts or Diamonds, which West could assist; whereas he could not soundly assist a bid forced by an informatory double. The successful outcome of West's Diamond assist with this hand well illustrates the soundness of the principle involved.

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 4. Before leading to this trick West can count but ten tricks in his combined hands, seven Diamonds, two Hearts and one Club. While it is remotely possible that the Queen of Hearts would be dropped on two leads of that suit, thereby establishing the Jack for the eleventh trick needed, East put another string to his bow in first attempting the establishment of a Club trick, upon which to discard a losing Heart. As this attempt does not sacrifice the possibility of a third Heart trick, nothing can be lost by the attempt. Since the establishment of a Club trick requires the use of every trick in Dummy that is possible, East must start the Clubs at once instead of leading trumps.

Trick 13. The established Club here makes, giving the Declarer game.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

JACK SHARKEY CAN TAKE GREAT CARE OF HIMSELF ANYWHERE, EVEN AT HOME

SWINGS MEAN LAWN MOWER

Jack keeps in shape by manicuring the lawns around his nifty estate in Newton once per diem. He's prouder of the looks of things there than he is of his ring record. And he's plenty proud of that.

MEET THE YOUNGSTERS

Dorothy and Marilyn, daughters of the heavyweight title contender, demand more of his time than Tex Rickard. After hugging sparring partners for three weeks, Jack gets a great kick fooling with his babies.

THE CLEANUP KID

Jack mops up in the kitchen as well as the ring. He has a good eye, too, and never misses a vital spot, after things have been mussed up.

The hands that will win a million are pretty good with the soapsuds, also. Sharkey gets into everything, including the kitchen sink.

$150 Purse Once Gave Al Mello a Thrill

By Jack Conway

"FROM Mill Boy to Champion!" That's the title of the book ... Mello, sensational Lowell welterweight, hopes to complete ... ring within a year with the aid of his fists of iron and heart ...

Mr. Boston

LOWELL promoters didn't cheer when Mello and Goldman entered ...

TOM GOODWIN of the Suffolk Club saw the possibilities in Mello. He got him his New England title shot with Eddie Shevlin, and later whipped him in with Morris Sarnoff, Jack Zivic, George ... and Eddie Goldman were the other ... boosters. Then came a patch ... champion in the former ... he was the prize package.

"Mello has been a great fighter since the night he knocked out Eddie Shevlin. It was not until Al flattened Roberts that New York gave him a tumble. They sometimes take a long time waking up over in Gotham. Jack Sharkey had to tame Harry Wills before they knew he was one of the leading heavyweight contenders. Tom apparently had not paired with fact Jack had pasted Fred Jacobs, King Solomon, Jack Renault and George Godfrey.

"Mello will go gunning in the Garden of Golden Opportunity when he starts shooting his blows to Hilbert at the Queensboro Stadium on Tuesday night. New York has gone nuts over Hudkins on account of the way he wrecks the hopes of welter contenders. Broadway bettors have installed him a favorite over Mello. Which doesn't mean a thing in view of the way Delaney, Mallon and some of the other boys who were supposed to have cashed in have taken them on the chin.

"Anyhow, Mello and Goldman have their bags all packed. They kick off from the South Station tomorrow afternoon.

"Meanwhile George Harrigan and the other good citizens of Lowell will sit back confident that Mello will come through with a victory."

Story of a Girl Who Asked That Life Should Pay Her in Full

Roen Ross, an ardent and beautiful girl, meets and loves Michael Scott. She is spending her vacation in Gloucester. The night before his return to Cornell, where he is taking a five year course in mining, Michael asks Roen to marry him when his studying is done. They promise enduring loyalty. Roen returns to her job as secretary for the manager of an insurance company in Kilby street. She is the sole support of her invalid mother, "Dearie," and her little brother, "Jackie." Through the death of her father, "Bobby-dad," five years previous, Roen has thrust upon her this responsibility. She struggles bravely to keep the trust with her father. But the debts grow. When she is almost panic stricken looking into the future, James Burton, her employer, pays her court. She cannot surrender Michael. Dearie urges her to take wealth. She favors James Burton. Roen remains steadfast, though wondering how she shall give Jackie the brilliant education she plans. Dearie guesses that she and Michael hope to marry when Michael earns a little more. She also fears that Michael will not be faithful. Christmas night Michael gives Roen a ring set with a blood-red ruby—his mother's engagement ring. He tells her: "That stone, Asthore, is the blood of hearts that never change."

DAILY SHORT STORY

THE MAN WHO WOULDN'T PROPOSE

By Eric Heath

DAPHNE EVERSLEY looked forlorn enough and studied her reflection carefully in a mirror of her dressing table. She was thirty. Yesterday she had been twenty-nine. It seemed to her that there was a tiny wrinkle at the corners of her left eye, a wrinkle she had not noticed before. She sighed.

She began to massage her face with cold cream. Of course she was tired, tagged to death . . . and she did not look her best. It had been a difficult evening from beginning to end. And now, after two in the morning, when she should have been hastening to get to bed, she was tossing about, with troubled thoughts about herself, her looks, her age.

Her birthday evening had been a terrible failure. Not that she would have admitted this to anyone, not even her own family. But, in her heart, she felt a gnawing, bitter disappointment. She had been so sure, a few short hours ago, that Leslie Barton would propose—Oh, he had been as attentive, as gallant as ever, if not more so. He had flattered and admired her, whispered sweet things, squeezed her hand while they were dancing . . . all that. But the one big outstanding adventure which she longed for had not taken place; he had not asked her to become his wife.

Daphne, though spiritualist counsels, had always been afraid to face the issue honestly. For over a year now, she had been drifting, drifting, content to look for no more than companionship. She had seemed confident in his wish almost to make a definite declaration—and then, all of a sudden, there had come a change. Almost as if he, too, had touched the pitch-dark, soft lights and good food.

She arrived before Leslie did, and as she waited for him, she felt a tremor of premonition. Somehow, last night seemed to have been a turning point for her. From twenty-nine to thirty was a long step—rationally, she believed that Leslie must sense something of what she was feeling.

When he came, she noticed at once that he was unusually gay and excited.

"Good news for you, old girl!" he said, after they had selected their table and seated themselves.

"Don't keep me in suspense."

"Well, the time—No, I won't tell you. You may guess."

"They have made you junior partner!"

He laughed. "Not quite. But I'll get that, too, you can bet on it. I'll see Jenks further some day. But what they've done is to offer me a wonderful opportunity, something almost too good. I'm to have that engineering job in Argentina."

"Argentina . . ." she said it reverently.

"It's a big thing for me," he affirmed enthusiastically. His hand on hers was almost boyish as he spoke, and his eyes lighted up with fervor.

Before she realized what she was saying, Daphne had answered impulsively:

"I've always wanted to go there!"

She blushed and looked over at him quickly, shyly. But evidently he had not even heard her remark, as he plunged into a glowing account of what his new work would be, how significant it was, what it would mean for his future.

"All he thinks of is his work, his career, himself!" Daphne reflected bitterly that evening, after she had escaped from her family to the seclusion of her own room. "But hasn't it always been like that? Every time the firm has advanced him his action has been the same. He's let anything go on—care about anything else—even me," she admitted. "Now trying to fool herself any longer—she must forget Leslie, try to plan her life without him.

She picked up a current magazine from the table in an attempt to put her resolve into practice at once. But Leslie's grave, gray eyes, his finely chiseled features blotted out the page in front of her. How could she forget him when he meant everything in the world to her?

She startled when the phone rang. It was after 10, and she was sure that Leslie would not call her that late. He never did. Then, too, she remembered he had said that he had an important consultation this evening which would probably detain him until late.

Daphne picked up the receiver in the hallway, and felt a wave of disappointment sweep over her when the voice that answered her "Hello" was not his. But, instantly, her nerves became taut, her pale face grew waxen and she tottered and would have fallen had she not reached out and steadied herself by climbing to the back of a chair.

"Fairview Hospital—yes—yes" she heard herself saying dully.

They would not let her or anyone else see Leslie until late the following afternoon. But from the doctor and a friendly nurse she had managed to glean a somewhat incomplete account of the accident. Leslie had been driving home from his interview with the trustees of the firm, the car had skidded, but, quite curiously, the fault had been that of the driver of the other car, who had escaped practically unhurt.

"I'll not ask you to tell me the truth," Daphne said with white lips to the doctor, as she clung to his arm. "I am brave enough, do you understand?"

The busy, harassed little physician looked at her with admiring eyes.

"He will live, I'm quite sure of that. Yes, with good care, he has a fair chance to get well again—in time, that is of course."

"In time?" echoed Daphne. "What exactly does that mean?"

"He may never be able to walk without crutches."

"I see."

There was something terrible in Leslie's eyes, when at last she saw him, something she had dreaded to find in them. It was apparent that he had guessed the truth, or he would not have looked like that. Daphne took both his hands in hers. Nothing mattered now. Her foolish little pride was all swept away.

"Dearest . ." she murmured.

"My own dearest . . ."

"I'm done for," Leslie was saying in a dull, lifeless tone. "Done for . . . finished."

He was like a bewildered helpless child. Suddenly, Daphne slipped her arm around his shoulders, drew his head against her breast and kissed his cheek tenderly.

"Well—I'm done for feeling sorry for me, Daphne," he said gruffly. "But you see, I don't want that. I don't want pity. I won't have it."

"I don't pity you, Leslie," she answered. "I love you."

He jerked his head around, looking at her squarely.

"What now? You say that now?"

"I have always loved you and I always will."

"What now? You say that now, don't you understand? You couldn't marry me now. It's too late. I realize what I've lost, but it's too late."

Daphne stroked his hair. "Perhaps I have something to say about that."

"It's the end."

"Perhaps it's the beginning, dear," she persisted gently.

He tried to draw away. "But I wouldn't let you marry me. I'm a cripple."

"I don't believe you will," Daphne answered quietly. "I don't care if a thousand doctors say so. But even if . . . oh, my dear, don't you see? You're mine, now, to shield and [illegible]

Perhaps one of the reasons you are so often disappointed is that you are too easily elated over apparent bright prospects.

Something is proposed, is agreeable and you at once become over-enthusiastic about it.

Then it turns out differently from what you expected and you are downcast.

Next comes the thought that luck is against you.

Don't be so enthusiastic that you can't see the possibility of failure. Jumping to conclusions is perhaps one of your faults.

If you would train yourself to slower and more thoughtful actions you would not have so many gloomy, depressed spells.

THE SAYINGS OF MRS. SOLOMON

By HELEN ROWLAND

ALAS, alas, my Daughter, how are the mighty fallen and the haughty laid low!

For behold, an Husband was once the Lord of a woman's heart and the height of a damsel's aspiration. Yea, he was the Rescuing Angel who delivered her from the curse of spinsterhood, and led her into the House of Bondage!

For Him did she rush the breakfast—and then keep it waiting! Unto Him did she offer up the palm and the morning newspaper!

His tastes were her tastes, his wishes her wishes, his politics her politics, and his word her law!

But, lo, it hath come to pass that an Husband is but the target whereon a woman practiseth her marksmanship, the Background for her career, and her stepping stone to freedom and eternal alimony!

Yea, he is the Poor Worm that produceth her silken hosiery, and the dumb creature that furnisheth her sables.

He is the Cash-register that respondeth to her every "tap"!

He is the Delicatessen's Darling and the Restaurant Keeper's Delight! He is the Safety-pin Maker's little gold mine!

He is the Mighty Power behind the wheel of the car, and the Great Force that runneth the lawn-mower and the vacuum-cleaner.

He is somebody to wash the DOG!

He is the uncomplaining creature for whom she cooketh with a can-opener, and unto whom she may offer "chicken patties" made of the leftover veal, and the Monday hash composed of the Sunday baked-meats.

He is the One that payeth for all her new garments, but upon whom she chooseth to wear out all her old clothes, and to inflict her headaches.

He is the Simple Soul unto whom she sendeth letters inscribed upon stray sheets of paper or the back of an old laundry bill.

He is the drawer of checks and the settler of charge accounts; the bearer of luggage and the packer of trunks; the buyer of tickets and the caller of taxicabs. Yea, verily, he is the family Goat!

Then, let his works praise him and give him the fruit of his labors, which is a box of hot cigars at Christmas, a cheap necktie upon his birthday, and the tough end of the steak, at all times!

MEDBURY SAYS—

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

A PENNSYLVANIA dairyman was arrested last week for selling watered milk. He claimed it wasn't his fault, he said the cattle got caught in the rain.

THE judge fined him three hundred dollars and told him that his cows should carry umbrellas.

THE district attorney eventually discovered that he didn't have a cow.

HIS dairy got along for two years without any.

BUT the customers were kicking so much that he had to go out and buy one.

A COW is a nice thing to have, especially if you're running a dairy.

HE finally bought a calf. He figured he'd start in by selling condensed milk.

AND if business got good, he'd buy a larger one.

HE used to deliver empty bottles to his customers and if they complained that there was nothing in them, he told them it was evaporated milk.

AND when they noticed that there was nothing at the top of the bottle, he explained to them that it was vanishing cream.

HE did quite a business selling nothing, and you could buy it in pints or quarts.

BY delivering the bottles empty, there was no danger of spilling the milk on the floor.

HE used to sell honey also, until his bee died.

INSTEAD of getting another one, he tried to cut down his overhead by using a wasp.

HE'S the kind of a fellow who'd eat lightning bugs in bottles and sell them for lanterns.

THEY ate caught him fooling the public by putting banana skins on cucumbers.

IN spite of being crooked, he's a wonderful salesman. During the last flood, he went down to Mississippi and Louisiana and sold five hundred bath tubs.

CLUBS 3 TOTS, MAN, TO DEATH IN REVENGE

Tampa, Fla., May 28 (A.P.).—A woman's scream, heard at daybreak by a railroad track walker, has led to the arrest of two middle-aged men and an account from one of them of a home invaded by a drunken man who mercilessly beat six members of a family with a heavy tool, four of them to death.

Herman Merrell, 45, a carpenter, and three children, Ralph, 11; Mildred, 5, and Buddy, 3, were dead. Mrs. Merrell, 35, and a three-months-old baby were near death today from wounds inflicted with a railroad spike maul.

From St. Petersburg, Leonard Sherrill, the dead man's brother-in-law, came to Tampa and identified the slayer as Leonard Thompson. Thompson was taken from a rooming house to jail, where he and Levine were held incommunicado.

"A desire for revenge was given as the motive, police said. Edward Sherrill, the dead man's brother, said they had no money and no enemies that he knew of.

"Thompson and I were drinking together Thursday night, police Levine related under arrest. "He told me earlier in the day that Merrell had done him a dirty trick and he was gonna get him. Next day I knew I heard a noise from the house. I went to the back door. It was dark, so I lit matches and walked around and looked at what Thompson done."

Thompson admitted he had been with Levine, but denied emphatically he was responsible for what the man saw, the mutilated bodies of six persons, found in the position in which they slept. Levine will not testify against his friend, police said, because of fear.

On being taken to the Merrell home, Levine pointed out three articles of things he had observed, even finding burnt matches he sat she dropped. He did know that Hugh Merrell, slept, had fallen from his bed in sleep and escaped injury.

GOODWIN ELATED OVER AUTO BRAKE CRUSADE

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Goodwin today expressed himself as elation with the crusade in Massachusetts against motor vehicles having defective brakes. During the week there have been only 8 persons killed in accidents involving motor vehicles, while for the same period last year the total number of fatalities was 32," he declared.

The registrations and license plates have been taken from 114 trucks and 68 touring cars because the brakes were found to be in such shape they could not be repaired.
